Fourteen nurses receive Awards of Excellence

A highlight of Nurses Week in Niagara is the Nursing Awards of Excellence, given out last night as nursing professionals gathered to be honoured by the Niagara Health System.

“This year, 87 nurses were nominated by their peers for Nursing Awards of Excellence,” says Derek McNally, NHS Executive Vice President and Chief Nursing Executive. “Reading through this year’s nominations, I was struck by two common themes that emerged and that really demonstrate the essence of what nursing at the NHS is all about: doing what is best for our patients, and inspiring and supporting each other.”

These are excerpts from the nominations, in the words of our nurses speaking about their peers:

- Gives her all, all of the time; expects that we should all do the same and challenges us to be better healthcare providers.
- Puts her patients’ needs and the organization’s needs before her own, and truly leads by example.
- Often challenges the status quo and asks questions like: “why can’t we do this?” Or “shouldn’t we consider that?”
- Her work ethic and consistent delivery of exemplary nursing care is unrivalled.

“On behalf of the NHS, I would like to congratulate all of our nominees and award winners,” says Mr. McNally. “Selecting the finalists is always a difficult decision for the selection committee since there are so many nurses who go above and beyond on a regular basis to provide an excellent patient experience.”
